This February we are stepping up enforcement of Delaware's seatbelt law—particularly at night!

- More than half of Delawareans killed in car crashes at night were not wearing seatbelts.
- Seatbelt use is often 10% lower at night, although your risk of being killed in a crash at night triples.
- State law requires everyone—even those in the backseat—to wear a seatbelt.
- You can be stopped if anyone in your vehicle isn't wearing a seatbelt, even if there are no other violations.
- The fine is $25 plus court administrative fees.
